

English Tea Traditions and Blends

From Victorian times to the 21st century, teatime remains a tradition to be savoured. Come and learn about the much-loved English tea traditions including both “high tea” and “low tea”. In addition, you’ll explore blends, such as “English Breakfast” and “English Afternoon”, which have made English teatime so popular.

Susan Livingston (Director of Product Development – Murchies)

Susan has been with Murchie’s for twenty years and, in that time, has acquired an expansive knowledge on tea blends and traditions. She brings both a historical and contemporary view to the revitalized tradition of English Tea. Murchie’s Tea and Coffee has been blending and serving teas in British Columbia for 115 years and enjoys a worldwide reputation of quality and excellence. The company was granted its own coat of arms by the Governor General of Canada in 1994. How much more “English” can you get?
